

ABSTRACT

Termination circuitry is to terminate one or more lines and is to draw current from a termination voltage supply and through a termination voltage delivery network. Partial termination voltage current shunting may be used to help define a range of current variation 5 through the termination voltage delivery network.